

A group of approximately ten people are standing in a vast, flat green field, possibly a crop field, under a clear blue sky with a few scattered white clouds. The people are dressed in casual outdoor clothing, including jackets and trousers. They appear to be engaged in a discussion or a field visit. The field is filled with low-growing green plants, and the horizon is visible in the distance.

Measures to reduce the risks of imported fraud cases from the exporter perspective

Exporters` opinion

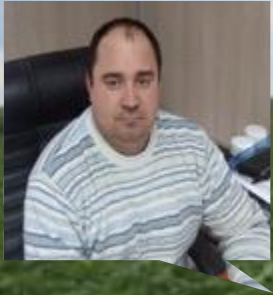

Agroecology, PE

Organic producer/exporter

Poltava Region

From our point of view the main risk for quality organic products rise storing conditions therefore we properly plan time and climate ons while storing organic products and pay attention to lot integrity. Not important for us trustful relations with our importer and fair price.

Exporters` opinion

Ritter Bio Agro Ltd

Organic producer/trader/exporter

Rivne Region

We are the organic producer from Ukraine, but also do some local trading activity. To our experience the main challenge is always to keep our eyes open and analyze the whole chain for each single delivery. In case we export products not from own production we precisely control our supplier and perform additional laboratory analyses.

There is

NO ONE SINGLE APPROACH

to safeguard organic supply chain. Each shipment is unique and it is due to single work and risk assesment of each counterparty

Transparent production and infrastructure

No/minimum to use old storage facilities

Dust sampling became important

Safe storage conditions.

No single movement of any lot without notice to Control Body

Measures have done by Ukrainian organic exporters

Safe logistic. Export by trucks

More laboratory analyses.
Cross check in different laboratories

Is that enough ?

Implemented national regulatory system harmonised with EU to strengthen ukrainian exporter position on the local and international level

Simplification bureaucracy system and trade barriers

Today Ukrainian organic exporter call for Serious attitude of the importer when choosing supplier. Fair price.

If we put our trust in the common sense of common men and 'with malice toward none and charity for all' go forward on the great adventure of making political, economic and social democracy a practical reality, we shall not fail.
